

Muni has been essential to San Francisco for more than 100 years and is a huge part of how residents get around the city. It is important to ensure that we do not cut Muni lines and services that help riders get to school and work on time.

Over the past 5 years, San Francisco has spent billions of dollars on Muni, yet we continue to be in a deficit. A lot of residents are concerned that SFMTA has wasted funds on many high salaried positions and unpopular projects, instead of investing in drivers and strengthening transit lines.

Residents do not want to have their taxes increased because they have lost trust in how funds are being spent. I also do not think a parcel tax will solve all of our problems. We need to take a serious look at how this money is being spent and make cuts that do not affect the riders.

We must continue to fund and improve transit while ensuring fiscal responsibility.
